Alternative Photo Processes Workshop

JULY 31-AUGUST 2, 2009

Learn the antique photo processes of cyanotype (blue) and Vandyke (brown) printing. Photographic images can be printed on paper or cloth (cotton, muslin or silk) in a royal blue or earthy brown.

We mix our own chemistry, coat the materials, dry, expose in the sunlight, then develop in water.

The processes are simple, experimental, and two of the oldest photographic methods still available.

You can continue with this process at home without expensive equipment, and it can be combined with drawing, paints, and collage.

Bring processed botanicals or other photogram— i.e. flat materials such as feathers, lace, transparent materials or x-rays.

Additionally, instructor will bring larger negatives which can be printed on computer generated transparency film or black & white Xerox photocopies on transparency film.
